Dr. Salman Abu Sitta has dedicated the majority of his life to the study and support of the Palestinian experience in a variety of forms, not least of which is his founding of the Palestinian Land Society and its publication of the Atlas of Palestine. He has researched and written a multitude of works on Palestine and Palestinian refugees, and has given talks on the history of Palestine and its international relations at prominent venues including the EU Parliament and leading universities in Europe and the United States. Dr. Salman's lecture traces the history of the relationship between Kuwait and Palestine from the Sykes-Picot Agreement of 1916 until the present day, analyzing the complex changes that have taken place in between.

This lecture is part of The Kuwait-Palestine Series, a CGS initiative encouraging an open-ended discussion on the various facets of the history between Kuwait and Palestine and the importance of this relationship for both.
