In announcing the upcoming National Council and Reconnaissance Research program, Council Founding President & CEO Dr. John Duke Anthony said that, “the Council is honored to welcome Tim Lenderking to speak about his important new role as the focal point of US diplomacy engaged in ending the fighting and suffering in Yemen. He is a talented and experienced diplomat who has been engaged in the Arab region, the Middle East, and the Islamic world for a long time.”

Multiple armed conflicts for over a decade have eroded governance in Yemen and created what is now considered the world’s worst humanitarian crisis. In addition to the humanitarian suffering, the conflict has killed tens of thousands and damaged the infrastructure of what has long been considered the most impoverished Arab country. One US- and European-funded organization, the Armed Conflict Location & Event Data Project, estimated that 130,000 people have died from the violence in Yemen since 2015, including over 13,000 civilians killed in targeted attacks. A recent report from four United Nations agencies projected that nearly 2.3 million children under the age of five in Yemen will suffer from acute malnutrition in 2021, with 400,000 of those expected to suffer from severe acute malnutrition who could die without urgent treatment.

UNRWA Chief Lazzarini to visit Kuwait, seeks ‘stronger co-op’

‘Many challenges UN agency is confronted with’

By Nawab Khan

BRUSSELS, June 23, (KUNA): The Commissioner General of the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), Philippe Lazzarini, is to visit Kuwait soon with the aim to strengthen the partnership for the benefit of Palestinian refugees.

“I will soon be visiting Kuwait. I am in discussions with Kuwaiti authorities for an official visit, which will take place this summer or beginning of the fall,” he told Kuwait News Agency (KUNA) in an interview in Brussels Wednesday.

“I look forward to discuss more in details the partnership between Kuwait and UNRWA. I know that in Kuwait there is a lot of support for the Palestinian refugees and I hope this will be translated also into a continuous partnership with UNRWA,” he said.

Commenting on Kuwait’s initiative to promote vaccination among Palestinian refugees in Lebanon, he said “the initiative to promote vaccination among the refugees is definitely a welcomed initiative. As we know in the region the vaccination rate is still lagging behind. So any effort to increase vaccination rate is more than welcome.”

On March 18, 2020, Lazzarini, a Swiss-Italian national, was appointed Undersecretary General and Commissioner General of UNRWA by UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres.

On the current situation of UNRWA, he told KUNA that there are many challenges the UN agency is confronted with.

Contribution

“One of them is the financial situation. The Agency has been in financial crisis for many years because there has been a discrepancy on what the Agency is supposed to deliver for the Palestinian refugees and what the voluntary contribution of certain member states have been, which has led to constant cash-flow crisis,” he said.

This has been highly unsettling for Palestinian refugees and for our 28,000 staff and for the countries hosting the refugees, he noted.

For this reason, UNRWA together with a number of supporter countries have decided to organise an international conference by the end of this October, during which the Agency will be presenting a blueprint in terms of what is expected from it in services delivery.

“The idea behind this is to promote better predictability so that UNRWA becomes a predictable partner in the region,” he said. The decision on the venue of this conference will be taken by Jordan and Sweden as co-hosts in July.

He noted that on Monday, June 21st, UNRWA launched a USD-164-million humanitarian and early recovery appeal following the Israeli bombardments of Gaza in May.

The 11-day Israeli air strikes have caused substantial damage to physical infrastructure, including homes and UNRWA installations, as well as water and sanitation networks in refugee camps, he pointed out.

Commenting on his current visit to Brussels, Lazzarini said he is meeting with members of the European Parliament and European Commission officials.

Bin Eidan said that the project consists of a residence near the Children’s Cancer Center, which is intended for their families who come from distant regions to be near their children, adding that many families from different regions in Bosnia will benefit from this humanitarian project.
